GRAY
MATTER
VOLUME
XLVIII

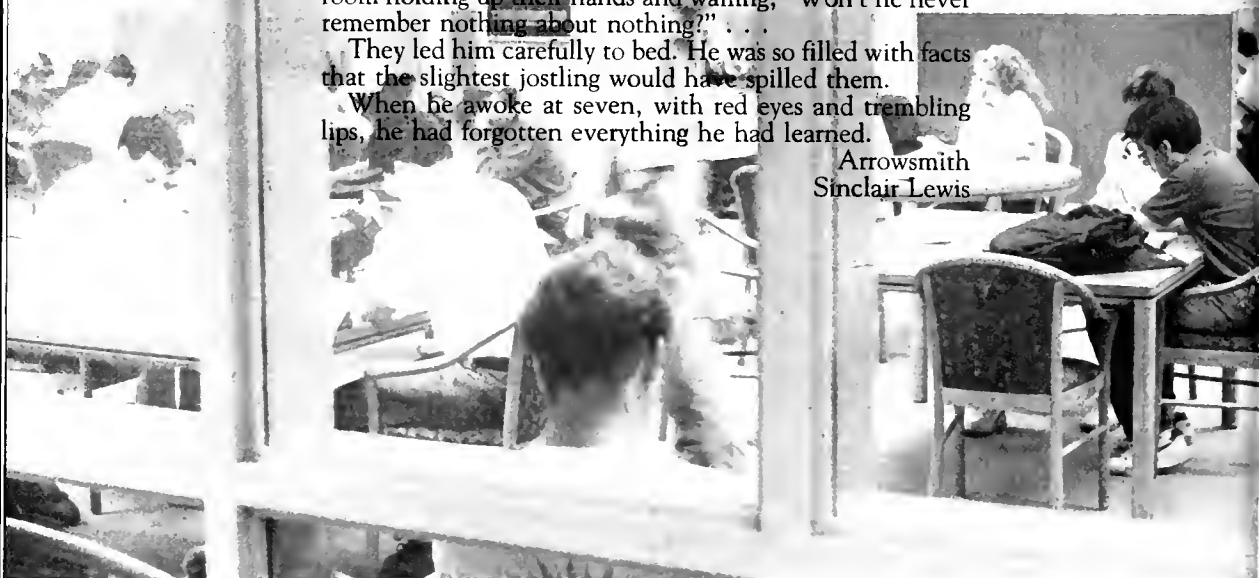

10:30 pm. I look up at the old Gray Building from Hawthorne. The lights burn on the fourth floor. Anatomy lab. Should I be up there? Is there a practical tomorrow? Who's up there? There's no much to learn. . . . I better get some coffee . . .

The night before his special examination, they kept him at it til two, with wet towels, black coffee, prayer, and profanity. They repeated lists — lists — lists to him; they shook their fists in his mournful red round face and howled, "Damn you, will you remember that the bicuspid valve is the SAME as the mitral valve and NOT another one?" They ran about the room holding up their hands and wailing, "Won't he never remember nothing about nothing?" . . .

They led him carefully to bed. He was so filled with facts that the slightest jostling would have spilled them.

When he awoke at seven, with red eyes and trembling lips, he had forgotten everything he had learned.

LOOKING BACK

over the past four years I have come to the realization of how incredible it is to finally approach the end of our medical school training. When I first arrived at Bowman Gray I felt as if I was on a mission against insurmountable odds. There was no way I could learn all the information I needed to know before I became a doctor. As I continued through my education I realized that we will always be learning more and more but that it will be strongly supported by our exceptional experience at Bowman Gray. I have many wonderful recollections of these four years, including that first experience in Gross Anatomy.

STUDENT ANATOMY GROUP

8

My autopsy group included Matt Smith and Brent Seifert. I will never forget Matt chasing the kidney into the drain of the sink or Brent "running the bowel". Third year was full of surprises, including our group's now legendary medicine conference, discussing who was on Surgery call, and being "Simonized". Although many attendings were excellent teachers, some of the most memorable teachers were interns and residents.

EMERGENCY

Emergency Entrance

RGENCY

The exit sign to Baptist Hospital stands vigil on I-40 on a cool wet September night in Winston-Salem. The downtown streets are almost deserted, the Emergency Department is bustling. Above, P.A. student Jeff Hinshaw discusses a patient with ED veteran Dr. Rolph Leonard, as Drs. D.J. Jones and Mark Pearson look down.

FALL CONVOCATION

At the Fifth Annual Fall Convocation, the Class of 1994 receives their white coats, symbolic of their transition to clinical training. James Toole, MD, (above), distinguished Professor of Neurology, gave the keynote speech.

In an attempt to alleviate some of the medical students' frustration in choosing a specialty, Student Affairs sponsored the first (annual?) Career Day in September. Chairpeople and faculty from 22 specialties talked about their fields of expertise and slurped ice cream on a windy, but sunny, afternoon. Here, Dr. Sherertz of Dermatology plugs skin, but recommends a competitive academic record for starters.

*Of earnest grasping,
would, if it were cold*

*And in the icy silence of the tomb,
So haunt thy days
and chill thy dreaming nights
That thou wouldst wish thine own heart dry of blood.*

*So in my veins red life might stream
again,*

*And thou be con-

I hold it towards you.*

CELEBRATING FIFTY YEARS

North Carolina Baptist Hospital and Bowman Gray School of Medicine, joined together in 1941 to become The Medical Center, celebrated a fifty year miraculous rise from a small hospital on the outskirts of town to a nationally recognized urban medical teaching institution, with state of the art research and clinical facilities. The festivities held in September 1991 featured speeches by Len B. Preslar Jr, President of NCBH; Dr. Richard Janeway, Executive Dean of BGSM; celebrity and actor Mr. Eddie Albert; Robert Petersdorf, MD, President Association of American Medical Colleges; Dr. Robert Prichard, Chairman of the Department of Pathology, and Dr. James Philp, Professor of Infectious Disease, who dedicated the new Dorothy Carpenter Medical Archive.

A lively debate concerning health care affordability mediated by Dr. Janeway, featuring Richard H. Rahn, PhD, Vice President and Chief Economist U.S. Chamber of Commerce and Stuart H. Altman, PhD, Dean of the Heller Graduate School of Brandeis University and Chairman of PROPAC in Washington D.C. was held.

Other events included dedication of the Clinical Sciences Building, The North Patient Tower, and the Hanes Research Building Addition; the unveiling of world renowned artist Nelson Shanks' portrait of Dr. Richard Janeway; and that evening a Black Tie Dinner and Ball at Benton Convention Center attended by Governor James Martin.

Fall Convocation (page 10) wrapped up the weeklong celebration.

Mr. Eddie Albert pictured with Mr. J. Paul Sticht, former Vice President of R.J. Reynolds. Sticht plans to donate funds for the new Geriatric Center.

Dr. and Mrs. Richard Janeway stand with Dr. Janeway's portrait, which was painted by artist Nelson Shanks.

Medical Student Research Day

The Seventh Annual Medical Student Research Day, which kicked off the anniversary celebrations, showcased the research of Bowman Gray Medical Students. Thirty-three posters were presented, making this the largest poster session so far.

A guest lecture on Coronary Artery Disease and HDL by John Gwynne, MD from UNC, began the day. The group then convened to the Medical School Board Room for presentation of the posters and judging by a faculty panel headed by Dr. Mark Lively, Biochemistry. Lem Kirby, MS IV, took first place for his research on "Insulin-like Growth Factor Binding Protein — A New Generation Tumour Marker?" conducted at Cambridge University. He received an all expense paid trip to the meeting of his choice.

JAMES E.
PEACOCK,
M.D.

Dr. Peacock was Phi Beta Kappa at the University of North Carolina as a zoology major, and AOA at University of North Carolina Medical School. He performed his residency training in Internal Medicine at the University of Virginia Medical Center and the University of North Carolina School of Medicine. He has been honored with the Basic Science Teaching Award twice and the medicine Housestaff Faculty Award for Excellence in Clinical Teaching on four separate occasions. Having received this many accolades for teaching only supports the choice for this year's recipient of the Teaching Excellence Award.

Timothy C. Pennell, M.D.

Timothy C. Pennell was born October 31, 1933 in Asheville, North Carolina. His bachelor's degree is from Wake Forest; in 1960 he graduated from Bowman Gray School of Medicine, where he then completed internship and residencies in General, Thoracic and Cardiovascular Surgery. Dr. Pennell became Professor of Surgery in 1981, and Chief of Professional Services in 1986. He is active in nearly forty professional and cultural societies, holds visiting professorships at hospitals and universities around the world, and is author or co-author of numerous articles. He has received many awards and honors including the Award for Teaching Excellence.

He is married to Jacque Clay Pennell, and has three children, Melanie, George and Jennifer.

Those who have been his pupil would agree that Dr. Pennell is a man with a charismatic presence. His lectures and teaching to medical students and residents endear him to many Bowman Gray graduates. It is for this demonstration of lifelong dedication to medicine and humanity that the 1992 Gray Matter is dedicated to Timothy Pennell, M.D.

The work of an institution in which there is no teaching is rarely first class. There is not that keen interest, nor the thorough study of the cases, nor amid the exigencies of the busy life is the hospital physician able to escape clinical slovenliness unless he teaches and in turn is taught by assistants and students. It is, I think, safe to say that in a hospital with students in the wards the patients are more carefully looked after, their diseases are more fully studied and few mistakes made.

THAT WHICH IS POSSIBLE is inevitable. I defend the normality of every distortion to which the flesh is susceptible, every disease, every amputation. I challenge anyone who thinks to discomfit my intelligence by limiting the import of what I say to the expounding of a shallow morbidity, to prove that health alone is inevitable. Until he can do that his attack upon me will be imbecilic.

Allons! Commencons la danse.

The telephone is ringing. I have awakened sitting erect in bed, unsurprised, almost uninterested, but with an overwhelming sense of death pressing my chest together as if I had come reluctant from the grave to which a distorted homesickness continued to drag me, a sense as of the end of everything. My wife lies asleep, curled against her pillow. Christ, Christ! how can I ever bear to be separated from this my boon companion, to be annihilated, to have her annihilated? How can a man live in the face of this daily uncertainty? How can a man not go mad with grief, with apprehension?

I wonder what time it is. There is a taxi just leaving the club. Tang, tang, tang. Finality. Three O'clock.

The moon is low, its silent flame almost level among the trees, across the budding rose garden, upon the grass.

The streets are illumined with the moon and the useless flares of the purple and yellow street lamps hanging from the dark each above its little circular garden of flowers.

Hurry, hurry, hurry! Upstairs! He's dying! Oh my God! God, what will I do without him? I won't live! I won't — I won't —

What a face! Erysipelas. Doesn't look so bad — in a few days the moon will be full.

Quick! Witness this signature — It's his will — A great blubber of a thirty-year-old male seated, hanging, floating erect in the center of the sagging double-bed spring, his long hair in a mild mass, his body wrapped in a downy brown wool dressing gown, a cord around the belly, a great pudding face, the whole right side of it a dirty purple, swollen, covered with watery blebs, the right eye swollen shut. He is trembling, wildly excited — a paper on his unsteady knees, a fountain pen in his hand. Witness this signature! Will it be legal? Yes, of course. He signs. I sign after him. When the Scotch go crazy they are worse than a Latin. The nose uninvolved. What a small nose.

My God, I'm done for.

Oh my God, what will I do without him?

Kindly be quiet, madam. What sort of way is that to talk in a sickroom? Do you want to kill him? Give him a chance, if you please.

Is he going to die, doctor? He's only been sick a few days. His eye started to close yesterday. He's never been sick in his life. He has no one but his father and me. Oh, I won't live without him.

Of course when a man as full-blooded as he is has erysipelas —

Do you think it's erysipelas?

How much does he weigh?

Two hundred and forty pounds.

Temperature 102. That's not bad.

He won't die? Are you kidding me, doctor?

What for? The moon has sunk. Almost no more at all. Only the Scotch have such small noses. Follow these directions. I have written down what you are to do.

Again the moon. Again. And why not again? It is a dance. Everything that varies a hair's breadth from another is an invitation to the dance. Either dance or annihilation. There can be only the dance or ONE. So, the next night, I enter another house. And so I repeat the trouble of writing that which I have already written, and so drag another human being from oblivion to serve my music.

It is a baby. There is a light at the end of a broken corridor. A man in a pointed beard leads the way. Strong foreign accent. Holland Dutch. We walk through the corridor to the back of the house. The kitchen. In the kitchen turn to the right. Someone is sitting back of the bedroom door. A nose, an eye emerge, sniffing and staring, a wrinkled nose, a cavernous eye. Turn again to the right through another and walk toward the front of the house. We are in a sickroom. A bed has been backed against the corridor entry making this detour necessary.

Oh, here you are, doctor. British. The nurse I suppose.

The baby is in a smother of sheets and crumpled blankets, its head on a pillow. The child's left eye closed, its right partly opened. It emits a soft whining cry continuously at every breath. It can't be more than a few weeks old.

Do you think it is unconscious, doctor?

Yes.

Will it live? It is the mother. A great tender-eyed blonde. Great full breasts. A soft gentle-minded woman of no mean beauty. A blue cotton house wrapper, shoulder to ankle.

If it lives it will be an idiot perhaps. Or it will be paralyzed — or both. It is better for it to die.

There it goes now! The whining has stopped. The lips are blue. The mouth puckers as for some diabolic kiss. It twitches, twitches faster and faster, up and down. The body slowly grows rigid and begins to fold itself like a flower folding again. The left eye opens slowly, the eyeball is turned so the pupil is lost in the angle of the nose. The right eye remains open and fixed staring forward. Meningitis. Acute. The arms are slowly raised more and more from the sides as if in the deliberate attitude before a mad dance, hands clenched, wrists flexed. The arms now lie upon each other crossed at the wrists. The knees are drawn up as if the child were squatting. The body holds this posture, the child's belly rumbling with a huge contortion. Breath has stopped. The body is stiff, blue. Slowly it relaxes, the whimpering cry begins again. The left eye falls closed.

It began with that eye. It was a lovely baby. Normal in every way. Breast fed. I have not taken it anywhere. It is only six weeks old. How can he get it?

The pointed beard approaches. It is infection, is it not, doctor?

Yes.

But I took him nowhere. How could he get it?

He must have gotten it from someone who carries it, maybe from one of you.

Will he die?

Yes, I think so.

Oh, I pray God to take him.

Have you any other children?

One girl five, and this boy.

Well, one must wait.

Again the night. The beard has followed me to the door. He closes the door carefully. We are alone in the night.

It is an infection?

Yes.

My wife is Catholic — not I. She had him for baptism. They pour water from a can on his head, so. It runs down in front of him, there where they baptize all kinds of babies, into his eye perhaps. It is a funny thing.

Laws of the House of God

from the book "The House of God"

by Sidney Sheldon, M.D.

I. Gomers don't die.

II. Gomers go to ground.

III. At a cardiac arrest, the first procedure is to take your own pulse.

IV. The patient is the one with the disease.

V. Placement comes first.

VI. There is no body cavity that cannot be reached with a #14 needle and a good strong arm.

VII. Age + BUN = Lasix dose.

VIII. They can always hurt you more.

IX. The only good admission is a dead admission.

X. If you don't take a temperature, you can't find a fever.

XI. Show me a BMS (best medical student) who only triples my work, and I will kiss his feet.

XII. If the radiology resident and the BMS both see a lesion on the chest x-ray, there can be no lesion there.

XIII. The delivery of medical care is to do as much nothing as possible.

Code Brown?

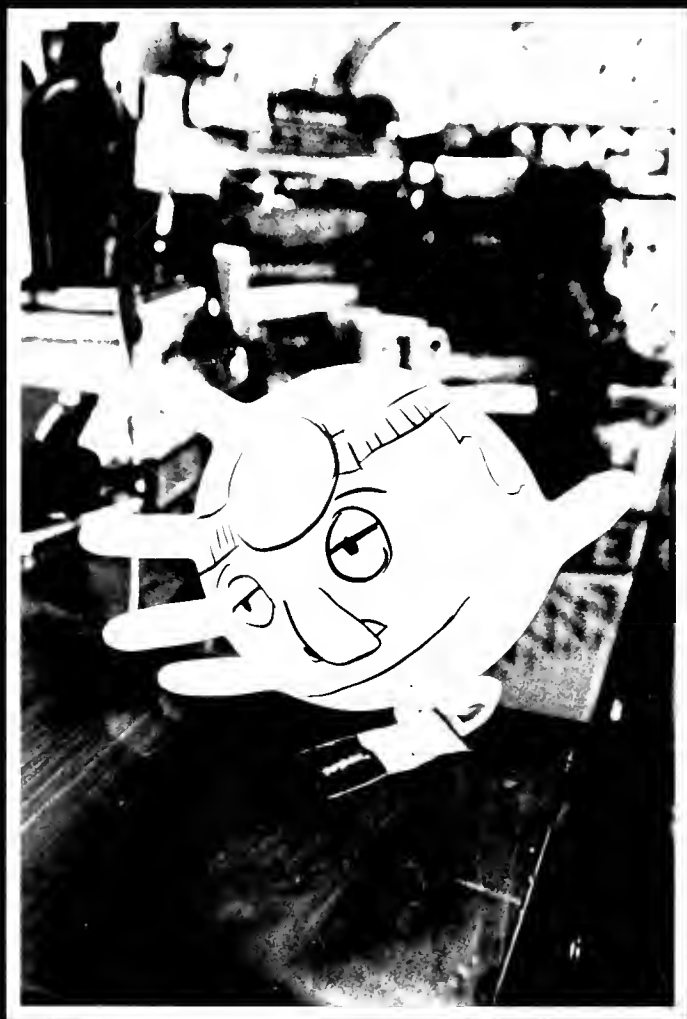

What's that?

"God! These medical school guys are all jerks!"

House Officers

It is better to shoot the patient than to shoot the works.

Warren W. Olds,
M.D.

Undergraduate: Duke University
Medical School: University of Virginia
Internship: West Virginia University, Obstetrics and Gynecology
Residency: University of Virginia, Radiation Oncology

We would like to recognize Dr. Warren Olds because of his contributions to the Class of 1992. He is a dedicated, innovative, enthusiastic teacher who takes a strong interest in his students. Indeed, he has gone out of his way to help ensure an excellent education for our class, both as a whole and on an individual basis. He has demonstrated considerable versatility as an instructor, teaching physical diagnosis, radiology correlates, medical ethics, medical history, and radiation physics and biology. He is a researcher par excellence as demonstrated by his introduction of stereotactic radiosurgery at Bowman Gray. Finally, he is quite active in the community with such organizations as Hospice, the American Cancer Society, and Physicians for Social Responsibility. As we leave Bowman Gray and begin the next phase of our education, he is an obvious choice for emulation. We will miss him!

Meredith Receives N.C.'s Public Service Award

On June 14, 1964, Dr. Jesse H. Meredith made history when he became the first American Surgeon to successfully reimplant a patient's severed hand.

Twenty years later, he headed a surgical team that saved the lives of nine Catawba County young people who accidentally swallowed potassium hydroxide, a powerful and highly corrosive chemical.

Three young men were so badly burned they had to have their stomachs and esophagi removed.

Meredith's surgical team crafted a new esophagus and stomach for each, and one patient required the reconstruction of his throat.

These former patients are among thousands of North Carolinians who credit Meredith with saving life and limb and restoring bodily functions during his 40 years of service.

He was honored Nov. 22 with the 1991 North Carolina Award in Public Service.

He was one of five who received the highest honor given by the state.

Meredith, professor of surgery, was appointed to the Bowman Gray faculty in

Dr. Jesse A. Meredith

1958. Over the years he has become widely recognized as a trauma expert, a burn specialist and a transplant surgeon.

In 1961, he developed the first intensive care unit at Baptist Hospital. The unit became a model for the state.

He also designed the medical school's first Department of Bio-medical Engineering and served for a time as its director.

He developed the kidney transplantation program at the Medical Center and has served as its director since it began in 1971.

He also had headed the Medical Center's burn unit since it opened in 1979. And, shortly thereafter, he developed one of the first skin banks. Skin from the bank serves as a long-term dressing for burns and large open wounds.

Meredith's interest in reducing trauma and improving the treatment of trauma victims has found expression in a number of activities:

- He developed and taught the first course in North Carolina for the training of ambulance drivers.

- He has served on the Regional Trauma Committee of the American College of Surgeons.

- He has been active in traffic safety research, serving as chairman of the North Carolina Medical Society's Advisory Committee to the State's Department of Motor Vehicles.

- He has been active in promoting and assisting in the development of state and local programs of medical preparedness for disasters.

- And he had a significant role in the development of the Medical Center's trauma service, which has been designated a Level-One Trauma Center.

In 1989, Meredith and his son, Dr. Wayne Meredith, who now heads the Medical Center's Trauma Service, visited Bolivia in response to a request by Bolivian doctors who wanted more information about caring for patients trauma and burns.

Although Meredith, a past president of the North Carolina Chapter of the American College of Surgeons, is perhaps best known for his life-saving and reconstructive surgical achievements, his work at the state level to improve the health of all North Carolinians has been equally significant.

He has served for the past 22 years (the past 11 years as chairman) on the North Carolina Commission for Health Services, which writes the rules and regulations covering public health in the state. The commission is responsible for more than 70 public health categories, ranging from shellfish quality to the control of sexually transmitted diseases.

The Class of 1992

HUGS

*It's wondrous
what a hug can do,
A hug can cheer you
when you're blue.
A hug can say,
'I love you so,' or,
"Gee! I hate to see you go."
A hug is
'Welcome back again!' and,
'Great to see you!' or
"Where've you been?"
A hug can soothe
a small child's pain
And bring a rainbow after rain.*

*The hug! There's just no doubt about it,
We scarcely could survive
without it.
A hug delights and warms and
charms,
It must be why God gave us arms.*

*Hugs are great for fathers and mothers,
Sweet for sisters, swell for brothers,
and chances are some favorite aunts
love them more than potted plants.*

*Kittens crave them.
Puppies love them.
Heads of state are not above them.
A hug can break the language barrier,
And make the dullest day seem merrier.*

*No need to fret about the store of 'em.
The more you given,
the more there are of 'em.
So stretch those arms without delay and give someone a hug today.*
